16 May 1985

Dear Mr. Casey,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you and the National Intelligence Officer for Warning, Mr. John Bird, the Assistant National Intelligence Officer for General Purpose Forces, [redacted] and the Senior Analyst from the East Asia National Intelligence Office, [redacted] for their participation in a panel discussion held on 2 May 1985 at Headquarters Marine Corps with Major General Richard Trundy, USMC, who is to be the J-3 (Operations) for the Pacific Command.

As you may know, we invited key senior intelligence officials from CIA, DIA, and State to participate in order to share with General Trundy what they considered to be the most significant issues in the Pacific Command. Mr. Bird, [redacted] gave very impressive outlines of issues in their respective areas, and provided further insights in the later discussion.

General Trundy left with a good appreciation of the most important intelligence issues involving the Pacific Command. Equally important, he left with a first-hand impression of the professionalism, capabilities and candid exchange of intelligence and opinions which characterize our intelligence community. Both General Trundy and I sincerely appreciate the contributions of Mr. Bird, [redacted] and [redacted]

Very respectfully,

L. W. SMITH
